Researcher - documenting, mapping and analysing eviction cases during the 1980s in Cluj-Napoca

Research Assistant - Work in culture and the culture of work. Changing trends in how work is organized. Case studies with regard to work in culture and informal work.'

The purpose of the research was to identify the main characteristics of flexible work carried out in Cluj-Napoca and the metropolitan area, and of the people who perform it.

Main Findings

- In many cases, the work procedures and the absence of adequate rules for unconventional work put artists and independent cultural workers in a precarious position.
- There is a significant need for an inclusive infrastructure (cultural policies and financing mechanisms) for independent agents in the cultural and creative industries.
- The typical work conditions of the culture industry, such as flexibility, mobility, the multitude of projects and specializations, are expanding quickly to other industries. Thus, understanding the solutions for the cultural and creative industries may bring many benefits to the future of work.
- The value creation process in the cultural industry is unevenly supported, impacting negatively the stability and sustainability of the industry.

Research Assistant - The impact of automation and digitalization on the labor and capital in Cluj-Napoca and the metropolitan area'

The purpose of the research was to determine the impact of automation and digitalization on the work force in Cluj-Napoca and the metropolitan area.

Main Findings

- 57% of jobs have a risk of automation, which is similar to the percentage calculated at European level.
- Routinary manual activities are the most affected by this change; however, the replacement of human work force with the robotic one will most likely occur at the level of tasks and not jobs.
- Employees whose jobs are likely to be automated are the ones who will bear the costs of these changes and, therefore, will need support.
- The economic ecosystem of Cluj-Napoca needs to create added value at local level.
- Public platforms for big data may support the changing process of work and may ensure a smooth transition into its new forms
